

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION

During the 1997 Tustin Tiller Days I was invited by Paul Danison, the Team Leader, and Jill Leach, the Editor, of The Tustin News to submit articles of my choosing to be published in their paper.

For the next nine years I had the honor and fun of publishing biweekly articles, mostly about computing but sometimes about sailing and other topics. These were published under the title, “The Doc is In” and had reasonably wide readership.

I tried to keep these articles short and to the point and hoped to offer my readers some insight and hints about modern computing. Being an avid sailor I also tried to share some of my experiences and my love of the sea.

However, like all things, this had to come to an end. The Tustin News was reconfigured and its’ emphasis changed. So on December 28, 2006, I submitted my last article and my goodbye to my readers.

Since that time I have remained very active in computing as well as sailboating. I have had, again, the honor and fun of being the RingLeader of the Friday ‘Coffee and Computers’ gathering at the Tustin Area Senior Center. This group is lively and active and each meeting is invigorating and stimulating.

It is because of ‘Coffee and Computers’ that I have wanted to start writing about computers as well as other topics again. Since the vehicle of The Tustin News no longer is available, I decided to use the medium of the World Wide Web and publish my material on my web site.

Please send me your comments and suggestions for topics.

And remember, keep the neurons happy, synapses snapping and enjoy computing.
